Classified ads

This is Canadian Mennonite's lowest-cost option. The ad appears in a single column and relies on the power of words to get the reader's attention. There are no graphic elements (logo or colour). This ad is often used to sell items, rent cottages, promote travel opportunities, and publicize support groups.

Sponsored space

Sponsors help pay for a two-page spread focusing on a topic of interest to Canadian Mennonite readers. Topics could relate to education, camping, peacemaking, community, mental health, travel and more. Canadian Mennonite provides support in developing the spread with writing, design, editing, copy editing and proofreading (as needed). Sponsors get formal recognition on each spread, including the sponsor's logo and website URL.

Pricing represents a $576 savings when compared to two inside full-page ads. For samples of sponsored space spreads, contact Michael Hostetler at advert@canadianmennonite.org.

Back page ads allow for an edge to edge print on the back cover of the magazine. To achieve this, there are two things to keep in mind; the bleed, and the safe area.

Bleed

Because offset printing is not a 100% precise technology, you must print beyond the trimming line so that there is no unprinted area visible after the page is cut. This means adding 0.25" beyond the printed area to each edge of the page.

The bleed should not contain anything of consequence.

This would make the total document size 0.5" wider and 0.5" taller than the final page size. In the case of a back page ad, that would make the total document size 8.625" x 11.125".

Safe area

The safe area is also necessary because of the imprecise nature of the printing process. Text, logos and other important graphics should be placed in the area within the safe area to make sure that they do not get cut off.

The safe area is the zone 0.25" from each edge of the page. This makes the area of the page that can contain important information 0.5" narrower and 0.5" shorter than the page size. In the case of a back page ad, that would be 7.625" x 10.125".

- Bleed - Background graphics, patterns or photos should extend to the edge of this area.
- Safe area - Critical elements should not extend outside of the white area.
