Reading, watching, listening: A buffet

When the conversation is lagging in social situations, one of my favourite questions to ask is, “What are you reading?” This inquiry often leads to an interesting interchange of ideas and suggestions.

I am my brother’s keeper

Many years ago now—I’m getting a bit long in the tooth—I took what I thought would be a bird course in my second year at what was then known as Waterloo College. It turned out to be anything but, and I remember more from that course than from any other in my seven years of university education. It was a course on political philosophy.

Albertans raise money in creative ways for MCC

No soup and pie fundraiser in Rosemary. No Mennonite Central Committee Alberta (MCC-Alberta) relief sale in Sherwood Park. No golf fundraisers with barbequed lunches. In other words, no fun—and no money being raised through MCC for all the vulnerable people living in over 50 countries in the developing world.
